1st Lt Theodore P Fahrenwald, 0732201, 436/352 Fighter Gp, MIA 8 June 1944
Intrvd 18 Aug 1944 et seq

Fahrenwald landed on the NW corner of the Tricqueville A/D within 15 feet of the pigpen of Moris MARAIS, whose wife soon hid him in the pen. He met the children and Moris' father andmother and brother and was quickly given civilian clothes. He explained that the English would be along in about 10 days. Afterhe was fed he as taken to the woods to hide. Later he was taken to thehouse tomeet a friend who spoke English, a Dutchman from the Frisians, Gabriel, who hadbeen in France about 10 years. They discovered that they could understand better Fahrenwald's French. That evening he went to Gabriel's house about amile away, and he moved from thishouse to the Marais to his shell hole inthe woods. He met a woman, LaPonsa, 30, attractive, spok English; a man, 7', built like a rail, both from the Maquis; HOUPSOL, who spoke fairly decent English. The wealthy landowner whoowned to Marais farm se med to be helpful. The helpers were trying to make contact in Pont Audemer. This group was supposed to have helped Sgt Bone from Beaumont, Texas A girl took him to Pont Audemer to the cemetery where they killed time looking for a grave while 7' tall reconnoistered. They saw the graves of some 15 allied airmen, beautiful covered with flowers. They met the caretakee of the cemetery. Then they went to some sort of ranch house affair andmet a commandant, Cesar, former French officer, 45, powerful, ruthless and also five or six of the toughest looking customers who Fahrenwald had ever seen. The latter were still talking about the 40 Germans they had disposedof thenight befor After a bottle party Cesar took casualty information, promising to send it by his radio which had been parachuted to him, and arranged to get I/P. Fahrenwald went for thenight to M PHILBERT to an old German barracks near a chateau. near StPaul Sur Pisle. He stayed with the caretaker and his family. Hemet a young man who had been a Nazi prisoner andhad been brutally treated. This chap and his attractive yung wife gave sme scivilian clothes. Cesar gave Fahrenwald two body guards, Pierre and Maurice, who followed him around like a shadow. He met a farmer named Leon, his wife, and eight children, and stayed a couple of weeks in his stable. Cesar visited frequently but never brought the I/P which he had promised, apparentlybecause he was afraid that Fahrenwald would leave. One night three Frenchescaped P/W, the Russians, and an Algerian were brought in for a couple of nights. During this period Fahrenwald went around on odd jobs with the Maquis.

About 4 July there was a Gestapo scare and the group moved to the woods S of Pont Audemer near a chateau between Campigny and Truville. After three days there a British sgt, Fred Giles, joined. Thenext day they moved to another place. Then a tall thin woman brought Louis Lynch, 1013 E&E, and F/Lt George Byar Taylor. Taylor was dead against the airmen carrying arms, so the four left after some trouble with the Maquis on the issue. After some walking they stumbled into another Maquis working out of Beuzeville and moved with them to Quetteville where they met a Polish RAF P, Stanley Lopka, and a B-17 P, Charles Blackwell, 1143 E?E, a young Irish Wellington gunner, Bill Anderson, and a couple of Poles, some 20 in all. After a week the chief of the whole works came down fom Paris, ayoung dynamic good looking French aviator, 33, 5'8", 155, very dark, raised in the US before the war (possibly the Jean Pierre who has been connected with Stahland and various SOE groups including Francoise). He gave the A/C story and advised against going through the lines. Lynch and Fahrenwald decided to leave anway and traveled with a young French guide who soon deserted them. After some tough walking they got to Dozule in 2 days and ~~Beuzeville~~, meeting 3 nts more andmore Germans. They stopped with an oldlady and made themistake of having her get M Hache to whom they had previously been directed. Hache showed up with three members of the Beauzeville Maquis, furious at the indiscretion. He could not get them through the lines and advised them to go with the Maquis. The men did not want togo back with the Maquis so they headed for Houlgate hoping to find a boat. Near Houlgate a woman took them to a refugee camp and hid them. Later another young resistance man helped them at his home. Somewhere along here they were given 1000 francs. When nothing could be done to find a boat they started S, Lynch wanting to go to Spain, Fahrenwald to St Malo.

on 19 July

About 15 km S of Houlgate they were picked up by the Germans and just failed 04/19/1944 bluffing their way out as Frenchmen. They were taken to a stable near Dozule and put with a few airmen and some British paratroopers. The Germans interrogated the men closely with threats but no violence.

They were later taken to BonnesBacque (?) where they were where they were kept in an old brick factory. One NCO was a fanatical Nazi andwas all for shooting the evaders. He made things a bit difficult for them. A British F/Lt, Jack Warock, was brought in. There are many details in thentes which need not be detailed.

About 1or 2 Aug 12 EM and the 3 officers were taken to Alencon. Word got around that AAF men were tobe sent on quickly to Germany. Fahrenwald estimate the situation quickly and arranged with Capt Cote, the British CO of the camp who was supposed to have helped some 20 out already, to go on a work detail. Fahrenwald escaped from the detail working near SEES. Walked for some 17 hours and finally stumbled into shelter with Vitrice, Richard, St Nicholas du Bois. He stayed 12 days and was liberated by the Free French column coming into the section.

He made his way back to England quickly, dodging WEA which he admits having heard about.

DEE

The original notes are detailed and present when complete a most amusing as well as exciting story. It was an excellent evasion.
